

Dear PM&FB,

Most of us have been left out of the debate in Washington over the future of the Internet. High-priced lawyers and lobbyists have no trouble bending the ears of lawmakers in Washington. But you and I rarely get the chance.

That's going to change. Tomorrow, Sen. John Kerry is a part a Commerce Committee hearing on the Internet. The senator has pledged today to listen to your ideas and respond via the SavetheInternet.com blog. Please add your voice to this debate.

Join Senator Kerry in a Conversation about the Future of the Internet

"Bottom line our economic and political future is tied up in a free and open Internet, available to all Americans," writes Senator Kerry. "That involves making sure the content of the Internet flows freely, and it involves expanding broadband to the urban and rural areas that are underserved with our current infrastructure."

Join Senator Kerry at SavetheInternet.com to discuss tomorrow's Internet hearing in Congress.

Join now

America continues to fall further behind the rest of the world when it comes to fast, open, and affordable Internet access. To get ahead, we need strong leadership in Washington and more involvement from people like you.

Share Your Ideas About Connecting Everyone

Last week, hundreds of people spoke out during a Stanford FCC hearing on Net Neutrality. The overwhelming consensus was that we need to take immediate action to stop large phone and cable companies from playing gatekeepers to the Internet.

Now's our best chance to send this message to Washington. Please join the conversation with Senator Kerry and let the Beltway pundits and lobbyists know that an open Internet is vital to the future of our economy and democracy.

Thank you,

Timothy Karr
Campaign Director
www.freepress.net
SavetheInternet.com

---

 Take action on this important campaign at: <http://www.savetheinternet.com/blog/>

You (pmfb@pmfb.com) are receiving this email as an opt-in subscriber to Free Press' E-activist Network. You can unsubscribe or manage your account at any time.

Note: Free Press is a national nonpartisan organization working to reform the media. Free Press does not endorse or oppose any candidate for public office.

---